Juche 112 (2023)

Over the past dozen years, many modern houses have been built for the working people throughout the land of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea under the energetic guidance of the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un.

Pyongyang, the capital city of the DPRK, has undergone a great change through one construction project after another, including Changjon Street, Unha Scientists Street, Wisong Scientists Residential District, Mirae Scientists Street, Ryomyong Street, Pothonggang Riverside Terraced Houses District, Songhwa Street and the 10 000 flats in the first-stage project in the Hwasong area; and the city of Samjiyon in Ryanggang Province in the northernmost part of the country has developed into a model mountainous city encapsulating modern civilization.

In rural areas across the country houses have mushroomed retaining regional and local features, and ceremonies of moving to the new houses have taken place almost every day.

Housing construction in the country has never been all plain sailing.

The ever-intensifying moves of the forces hostile to the country to isolate and stifle it, the global public health crisis and repeated natural disasters have been a formidable challenge to the nation.

Moreover, as the country pursues the policy of building houses at state expense and giving them free to the people, the housing construction has demanded a huge economic investment by the state.

Against all these odds, the Workers' Party of Korea and the DPRK government, regarding it as the most important of state's affairs and the mode of its existence to improve the people's standard of living and make selfless, devoted efforts for their good, have built many excellent streets and villages in the capital and regional areas, thus providing the working people with a cradle of happiness.

It is Kim Jong Un's steadfast will radically to change the living environment of the people across the country and build his country into a socialist ideal one admired by the whole world, a socialist paradise where the people live in comfort and harmony while enjoying the highest level of civilization.

The Korean people will lead a more and more civilized, happier life in the new streets and houses which are springing up one after another.

Endeavouring to Provide New Houses to Victims of Natural Disasters

The DPRK suffered massive disasters in a number of cities and counties due to the consecutive typhoons and heavy rains in 2015, 2016 and 2020.

Kim Jong Un, cherishing the principle that there is no more serious emergency for the Workers' Party of Korea than the pain of the people and that no revolutionary work is as important as alleviating their misfortune, stood at the forefront of the reconstruction projects.

He visited the devastated areas several times to learn about the damage first-hand; he wrote and sent an open letter in a disaster-stricken area; he saw to it that the construction workforce, comprising a total number of 12 000 WPK members from the capital city of Pyongyang, was dispatched immediately to the devastated areas; he ensured that the Party adopted at its important meetings crucial decisions for rehabilitation of the affected areas.
